Rabbi Leo M. Abrami

Rabbi Akiba and Ben Azzai's Great Debate

Our Talmudic Sages once asked themselves an intriguing question: What is the most important principle of the Torah? Rabbi Akiba argued that it is the Golden Rule: "You shall love your neighbor as yourself" (Lev. 19:18). Akiba's student, Ben Azzai, differed. He suggested that the most important principle of the Torah is "This is the record of the descendants of Adam. When God created human beings, he made them in the likeness of God" (Genesis 5:1).

In other terms, you must respect all human beings because they were all created in the image of God and endowed with an intellectual mind and a moral conscience. Therefore if you harm the divine image in any of its forms, you would be denying the essential kinship that exists between all human beings.

For Rabbi Akiba, love should be present in all our interpersonal relationships, but for Ben Azzai, acknowledging the Divine image in every person, is by far the most comprehensive principle of the entire Torah - the bedrock of all biblical teachings. Indeed, says Ben Azzai in the Wisdom of our Sages (Aboth 4:3):

He (Ben Azzai) would say: "Do not despise any human being and do not dismiss anything as of no value - for there is not a person who does not have his hour, and no thing that does not have its usefulness"

If anyone wants a name listed for a mishebeirach, please call the office by Wednesday of the week and the name will go into the bulletin for that week.

A prayer for healing can be said at any time and does not require a minyan. The Amidah (page 113 in Siddur Sim Shalom) shows a format that can be used: "May it be your will, Lord our God and God of our ancestors, to send perfect healing, of body and soul, to _____, along with all others who are stricken".
