Read by Dr. Iris Kingma-Johnson

In this week's parsha, Moses delivers a passionate address to Israel. He recounts his unanswered plea to cross the Jordan River, accepting that God has designated Joshua to lead the nation into the Promised Land instead. Transitioning from his personal grief, Moses commands the people to uphold God's statutes and ordinances without altering them. He powerfully recalls the awe-inspiring, fiery revelation at Sinai, warning against the catastrophic dangers of idolatry. Moses emphasizes Israel's unique relationship with the Creator, reminding them that God is merciful and faithful to His eternal covenant.
