Parshat Eikev is the continuation of Moshe's farewell address. He encourages the nation with the promise of reward for keeping the commandments and reassures the people that God will help them conquer the Land of Israel. He extols the land for its special produce and gives the mitzvah to recite Birkat Hamazon (grace after meals). Moshe warns the people to not be led astray by prosperity and cautions them to remember all their misdeeds during their journey through the wilderness. Parshat Eikev recounts the story of Aharon's death and the selection of the Levites. Moshe reminds the people of all the miracles they witnessed first-hand. Then the parsha concludes with the second passage of Shema: וְהָיָה אִם-שָׁמַעַ (V'haya im sh'mo'a).
